buying a bed or mattress €ÄÄÄ not least what size you should opt for. If you€ÄÄÄAre buying a bed for two adults then there are a number of things that you need to consider. Watch our video on why bigger is better. Length of Bed Firstly, the length. It is advisable to buy one that is at least 10cm longer than the tallest person. The last thing you want is for your feet to be dangling over the end of the mattress or having to curl your legs up. The length of a standard UK double bed is only 190cm (6ft 3€ÄÄÄ), so anyone taller than 5ft 11€ÄÄÄ (180cm) should really opt for one that is 200cm (6ft 6€ÄÄÄ) in length. A UK king size bed measures 200cm in length, as does a superking size, so either of these options would be preferable. If you€ÄÄÄAre a particularly tall person, some bed manufacturers make products that are 215cm (7ft 0€ÄÄÄ) in length. Alternatively, you could choose to purchase a €ÄÄÄbed extender€ÄÄÄ type product. The majority of British couples still sleep in a standard double size bed which is only 135cm (4ft 6€ÄÄÄ) wide. This provides each user with just 67.5cm or about 2ft 3€ÄÄÄ of space each which is less than we give a baby in a cot! It€ÄÄÄs certainly very cosy for two people and with so little room to move, you€ÄÄÄAre more likely to disturb your partner every time you change position, resulting in a poor night€ÄÄÄs sleep. However, some couples prefer to sleep in close proximity to each other, claiming that it improves intimacy compared to sleeping in a much bigger bed where you literally have to go searching for your partner! Although the illustration above shows two people sharing a small double (120cm or 4ft wide) bed, we would only suggest this size as an occasional bed for two people. This size would be more suitable for a single user, especially with UK studies showing that we€ÄÄÄAre getting bigger and heavier due to our diet and sedentary lifestyles! Because it doesn't necessarily cost a whole lot more to go up a size. In seven years, every £100 spent on a new bed costs only 3.9p per night. Because 16 other countries can't be wrong! This is how many boast medium-sized beds of Britain's largest. At the top of the league are Belgium, Greece, Holland, Iceland, Finland and Switzerland, where most people sleep in a skilful 160 cm by 200 cm bed. On the contrary, the British buy even more 135 cm for 190 cm beds. Because you spend as much as you can afford in the best possible home, vacation, car, kitchen, TV and audio system. So why are you so stingy when it comes to buying a bigger bed? Because you don't want to leave yourself behind! Although two-thirds of us still opt for standard sizes, larger beds are becoming more and more popular among those with room space to hire one: 33% of double sofa and bed sales are now 5 feet (king-size) or larger. (Consumer Market Monitor GFK NOP and Mattress Market Monitor, December 2010). Because the average person twists and turns 60 to 70 times a night – so you want to put as much space between you and your partner as possible to reduce the disturbance factor. Because you might not be as young as you were – or thin! A 2014 World Health Organization report stated that 28.1% of adults in the UK were classified as obese, in which case the "two in a 4-foot 6ins scenario" could put your relationship under strain. Because once you've slept in a king size, you'll never want to be a second-class sleeper again! Read our best tips for buying the best bed for you.
